Struggle for Cultural Identity

(The First 3 are described in a very detailed points in the book)

Titu Mir

Biography: 1. Was a disciple of Syed Ahmed Shaheed.

2. His real name was Mir Mirthar Ali.

3. He was from West Bengal.

4. He was a man of Action like his teacher.

5. Killed in 1831.

Beliefs: He was a man of action.

He believed in the practicality of life.

He did not like the rule and cruelty of British and Hindu Landlords.

It was his belief to stand against the Oppressors Rule.

Work: He provoked the British and gave confidence to Muslims to stand against the cruelty to protect their identity.

He attacked Hindu Landlords and defeated them boldly.

He made village of Nalkerbaria, his head quarters and gathered a small army.

He constructed a Bamboo Fort for his army to stay.

Importance: He provoked fear In hearts of British and zamindars.

He gathered a small army.

He inspired Muslims to take defence for their religion and identity.

The British Arrival and Expantion

Introduction: Some of the British Merchant's sought permission from the Queen Elizabeth 1 to trade with India and started their trade in 1612. Their first post had been established at Surat in 1608.

Slowly the influence grew. In 1664, trading post established in Bombay. 1690 post in Calcutta. By end of the 17th Century, EIC was thinking how to lay a permanent British Hold over India.

Expantionism: The rule of 3.

British used Divide and rule policy to rule and capture India. They used further 3 methods to capture over India:

1. Direct Wars: fought with Hyder Ali and Tipu Sulatn of Mysore notably. Also with Nawab Siraj and Mir Qasim.
2. Subsidiary Alliances: These were the alliances made with local princes. According to the terms, the real matters of the land were given in hand of British in return of British protection and money. Furthermore the ruler could stay on throne though only as a British puppet. In this British was able to reinforce its control over India.
3. Doctrine of Lapse: The law stating that all rulers under the terms of subsidiary alliances if do not have any natural male heir then after their death the land will belong to British. One of the affected was Rani of Jhansi who later played an important role in the War of Independence 1857.

Battle of Plessey: The French encouraged the Nawab of Bengal to attack the EIC base at Calcutta. Further more the Fortification of British post on Calcutta was also against agreement with the Nawab of Bengal and so Siraj-ud-Daulah marched over Calcutta and seized Fort William and locked the British residents in a small room. 23 out of 65 people died and so Battle of Plessey began. Robert Clive succeeded in defeating Siraj by bribing one of his key men Mir Jaffer. Jafar was made the new Nawab of Bengal and Bengal came under EIC's rule.

Assault on Afghanistan: The British were threatened about Russia seeking to expand its territory. In 1939, British invaded Afghanistan and installed its own puppet ruler, however the British army could not face the difficult terrain of Afghanistan as well as the locals and soon within Two years the Afghan's rebelled and massacred the British force. Out of 4000 soldiers, only one doctor from Kabul survived and reported the incident.

The Annexation of Sindh: In 1843 The British pride was hurt by the invasion in Afghanistan and decided to attack on Sindh under Sir Charles Napier to restore their Pride among Muslims and to capture the important Route through Bolan pass. Even in Britain many people condemned Napier's action for they had broken a friendship treaty with the Amirs of Sindh.

The Capture of Punjab: The British now turned to Punjab threatened by the increasing power of Ranjit Singh and now to capture the trade route over Indus River and Khyber Pass. The Sikhs were worried also and so they attacked on British controlled India in 1845, First Sikh War. Their main army was destroyed. Finally in 1848-9 Second Sikh War, the Sikh army was destroyed and so the British took over Punjab. The NWFP also came under British rule with Capture of Punjab.

Pakistan Movement

The Partition of Bengal, 1906- Bengal was partitioned due to some very important reasons.

1. Bengal was a very large province geographically and population wise. It was an area with a population of 54 million (42million Hindus and 12 million Muslims) in East Bengal alone and 31 million in West Bengal.
2. It was the demand of Muslims for they wanted a separate province in their rule where they would have more favour and better jobs. So to make Muslims happy.
3. They wanted to cut the power of Indian National Congress which had started speaking against British agitating people. Further many terrorist agencies had sprouted up, so to tackle them it was a necessary step for British.

Reaction of Muslims: Muslims were happy as there demand had been approved. Muslims, who had been denied of education and many other facilities while Hindus prospered, had their positions improved overnight. Muslims were happy as they had recognition now. They were now able to escape from Hindu oppression. They had a place where they could protect their religion, values and identity. They felt a feeling of loyalty for the British.

Hindu Reaction: Hindu were very angry and they started non cooperation campaign. They blamed British of dividing them with their Divide and Rule policy. They claimed that British had tried to weaken Hindu Unity because they had started to call for reforms through the use of Congress.

Hindus performed many protests and many petitions were sent to the government. They attempted assassination over the new viceroy Lord Minto due to this event.

They started a Swadeshi Movement in which they stopped buying British goods and threw many British goods in fire. British sales dropped dramatically.

Simla Deputation and Formation of Muslim League: Muslims watched Hindus reaction on partition of Bengal and decided something had to be done to protect their identity.

Further more National Congress was dominated by Hindus and Muslims needed a base of their own as their voice for the British for Hindus could not be trusted to favour Muslims.

They wanted to stand up and have some rights. They needed to get some reforms. They wanted right of separate electorate to protect their interests, religion and language. Thus they formed they had a meeting with Viceroy Minto in Simla on 8th October 1906.

Simla Deputation: Asked for separate electorates. They asked for higher percentage of seats than their higher population.

Morley Minto Reforms, 1909: Also known as the Indian Council Acts. Basically it increased representation of Hindus and Muslims in different councils.

Reversal of Partition of Bengal and its effect: Because new viceroy and King George 5 ordered for the reversal of partition. British had been forced to reverse by Hindu protests. The British feared more assassination attempts from Hindus.

It affected the Muslims greatly whose feelings of loyalty had been taken for granted and they realized that they need to be organized to have a voice of their own.

The Lucknow Pact, 1916: Was the first Agreement between Congress and Muslim League. Important as it established Jinnah as the focal point for this agreement and showed his great political abilities. It was done because the Muslim League felt that they needed the support of Congress in its early years. Because they thought they could pressurize British together in accepting their demands. (See full detail in the book page # 57-58)

The Montague Chelmsford Reforms, 1919: Were meant to be the promised concessions to Indian from British after World War One. Basically introduced a system of Diarchy in which certain subjects like local government, education, health and other facilities were transferred under the Indians rule while the real power remained with the viceroy like foreign affairs, Police and Revenue. Gave right of separate electorate to Muslims.

Rowlatt Act, 1919- Prison without trial: This act was passed when the protest over the Mont-Ford reforms started and other minorities began to demand separate electorate. The act was passed allowing arrest without warrant, detention without bail and provincial government ordering people where to live.

Amritsar Massacre: After passing of Rowlat Act more agitation started a new series of protests and on a curfew time, people about 20,000 in number turned up for a peaceful protest at Jilianwala Bagh where G. Dyer ordered his troops to open fire on crowd without warning killing and injuring many.

Khilafat Movement

Reasons to start it: After World War 2, British decided to break the Ottoman Empire. Ottoman Empire held great importance to Muslims in India and so they wanted to protect it and save the Khalifa.

Because the Holy places of Muslims were in the Ottoman Empire so there was a great threat that British might harm Holy places of Muslims.

Reasons of its failure: Because of many reasons the movement failed.

Withdrawal of Gandhi: Hindus had been cooperating in this movement by performing their own non-cooperation to British. An incident at Chora Chori where many Hindus were killed caused Gandhi to withdraw with his Hindu force which weakened the Movement's strength.

Hijrat Movement: Because many Muslims tried to migrate towards Afghanistan but were not allowed in the country so they had to return to find their properties plundered and captured by Hindus. This increased rifts between the 2 nations and also weakened the Movement as Muslims did not have the strength to take part in it.

Moplah Uprising: Some Muslim Peasants in South India attacked and destroyed a police station and killed many Hindus. British was angered by this Uprising and so they became firm on their decision.

Declaration of Turkey: Turkey itself declared itself independent when Kamal Ataturk removed the Khalifa and so the purpose of the movement failed and it ended.

The Simon Commission, 1928: This council was formed 2 years earlier by Conservative Party because they feared the Labour Party to give too much concessions to Indians so it was formed 2 years earlier. Its purpose was to build a unanimous constitution. It contained all British Officials.

Nehru Report, 1928: Simon Commission appointed Motilal Nehru to discuss and make a unanimous constitution and after much discussions when the final version of report came out it omitted all Muslim rights.

It disapproved for right of separate electorate for Muslims. It asked Hindi to be the official language and Muslims were given less representation.

The report reformed Muslim fears about Hindu dominion and the threat to their identity.

Jinnah's 14 points: Jinnah gave his 14 points as an answer to Nehru Report. It gave aims for Muslim League. He gave it as His own Constitutional Formulae. It demanded Provincial autonomy. It demanded separate electorate and rights of Muslims in minorities.

The 14 points were of great importance as they became the aims and basis for the demand of independence and partition.

Round Table Conferences, 1930-32: These were held in London to discuss a unanimous constitution with the Indians.

1st Round Table Conference: Jinnah and Muslim League attended. Congress boycotted because Gandhi was imprisoned due to his non-cooperation and Salt Movement. The Conference failed in its main purpose but was achieved little success as British agreed the introduction of representative government at provincial level.

2nd Round Table Conference: Both Jinnah and Gandhi attended it. Gandhi took a hard line and refused to discuss minority problem claiming to represent the whole Indian community. Congress stood by Nehru Report and refused to listen to anything. This conference failed as well. Little achievement in this was the acceptance for NWFP and Sindh to be given provincial status and governors.

3rd Round Table : Was held in 1932 and neither Gandhi attended nor Jinnah. The Conference was a complete failure. The only success was the passing of Communal Awards.

Chaudhary Rehmat Ali and His pamphlet: In 1933 Chaudhary R.A. suggested partition but none of the Muslim leaders agreed. He later issued a pamphlet which gave the name and its origins for his supposed partitioned Muslim Country. He gave the name Pakistan. P for Punjab. A for Afghania (NWFP). K for Kashmir. I for Iran. S for Sindh. T for Turkiministan. A for Afghanistan. N from Baluchistan.

The Government of India Act 1935: Was the Final Constitutional Act by British Government for India. It announced Elections. Raised representation and also gave right of separate electorate to Muslims. Indians were not happy with it but accepted it due to the upcoming elections.

1937 Elections: Both Congress and Muslim League participated and Muslim League lost poorly. Congress won the elections. It taught how Muslims needed to be more organized. It gave them experience of an election. It also gave realization that ML had an Image Problem and needed to focus on area with the minority of Muslims for there they had fared better results. Thus began the cruel age of Congress Ministries.

Congress Ministries 1937-39: Muslim League was badly treated by Congress. Congress refused to cooperate with them. Congress ministries started to introduce a series of measures, all which threatened Muslim Identity and culture. One of them was the “Bande Mataram” Scheme, in which a Hindu Nationalist song which encouraged to expel Muslim was made compulsory to be sung before the start of every day official business and provincial assemblies.

The second famous issue was the Wardha Scheme in which Education was now in Hindi, spinning cotton by hand was introduced in the school curriculum and religious education was excluded. All Students had to bow to a picture of Gandhi before the start of the school.

Further more Azan was forbidden, punishments on slaughtering of cows were introduced and attacks on mosques were done. Sometimes pigs were pushed in the mosques and noisy processions were arranged near the mosque during the time of prayer. Anti-Muslim riots were also performed in which Muslims were killed, insulted and their properties were captured. This increased Hate and rifts between the 2 nations and The period was known as the Congress Tyranny Period.

Congress Ministries Resign 1939: In 1939, World War 2 broke out. Lord Linlithgow announced India at war with Germany. Congress was angry on not being informed before the announcement about Viceroy’s Decision and refused to cooperate. They demanded Self Rule and when Immediate Self Rule was not promised, Congress resigned from government. Muslims celebrated at the end of the age of Congress Tyranny and they named it “The Day of Deliverance” offending the Congress Deeply.

August Offer, 1940: Again Lord Linlithgow made an offer to the Indians which increased representation in Executive Council of Indians while gave them the right to frame their own constitution after war. However Congress refused this offer.

Pakistan Resolution, 1940: At the annual session of Muslim League, The Resolution for a separate homeland was passed in which it was demanded that all Muslim majority provinces should be grouped as a one unit separate land. The Resolution was known as Lahore Resolution but the Hindu press began referring to it as “Pakistan Resolution.”

Cripps Mission 1942: Sir Stafford Cripps was sent with some proposals to Indians which stated that after War India can have Dominion Status after the War. Constituent Assembly to frame new constitution and members for this assembly to be elected after War.

However Congress refused for the wanted Immediate Self Rule and they declared the proposals as “stale”. Muslims refused because they wanted a separate homeland and nothing else.

Quit India Movement 1942: In anger of Cripps Mission proposals and to pressurize the British in the crucial situation, Congress started a mass movement against British demanding British to leave. Jinnah condemned the Congress and saw it as an attempt to exploit British. British however became more determined to keep hold and shut this movement down by arresting many leaders and killing many people through the use of air bombing and gas.

Gandhi-Jinnah talks: A number of letters and conversations were held between the 2 leaders in 1944 however the result was disdainful as Gandhi wanted Self Rule first and then consider partition while Jinnah wanted Partition first and no other alternative. Gandhi wanted power in hands of Federal Government while Jinnah wanted provincial Autonomy. This widened the gulf between Hindus and Muslims even further.

The Simla Conference: Lord Wavell held a conference as a last try to bring the two communities together suggesting the formation of an Executive Council which will have equal representation from both communities. However Jinnah refused this offer demanding only partition.

1945 Elections: Muslim League won this election by a great margin with the motto of a separate homeland. Furthermore the Tyranny of Congress Ministries could not be forgotten so easily and Muslims could not risk the life of their identities again.

Cabinet Mission 1946: Under Sir Stafford Cripps a cabinet was formed to try to find a settlement acceptable to everyone in India. However on finding little common ground between the communities, the Cabinet gave a plan which rejected Pakistan establishment while dividing India in 3 parts: A= Hindu majority. B= Muslim Majority. C=Bengal and Assam. Each part was to have local autonomy. Foreign Affairs, defence and communication was to be managed by Central Indian Union.

Furthermore it suggested formation of an interim government. However the plan was refused because of Congress disobedience to the Cabinet Plan.

Direct Action Day 1946: It was peaceful demonstration to show that Muslims wanted Independence and British should hurry up with it. However in Calcutta it turned to serious rioting and 4000 people died in it.

3 June Plan: The plan finally announcing Partition of India into 2 states. It grouped Muslim provinces and Hindu Provinces as single while giving right to the princely states to join any of the 2 countries with the vote of their people.

Boundary Commission: The Boundaries of partition were done by this commission under Sir Radcliffe and Mount batten who unfairly gave certain Muslim areas like Gurdaspur, Ferozpur and Calcutta to India causing serious problem for the future of Pakistan.

Ayub Khan

Came up to rule by martial law. He thought that army needs to rule now to restore stability to the country. He did not like the politicians because of their criticism of the army and general Ayub. East Pakistan was becoming rebellious so to put down their power and to start development in the country, Ayub Khan took over the rule.

Gave us the 1962 Constitution.

Introduced System of Basic Democracies.

Agricultural Reforms: Redistribution of lands for a better output. Big landowners were forced to find tenants. 3 major dams were built to aid agriculture. Loans to build wells were given. Ayub brought about the Green Revolution.

Industrial Reforms: Loans from Western countries were taken. Oil refinery in 1962 and Mineral Development Corporation. RCD was signed for industrial and trade development. Export Bonus Scheme for exporting industries. However with the increase of Industry Pakistan became dependant on Foreign Aid.

Social and Economic Reforms: New curriculum and textbooks. More schools were built. Laws were passed to benefit and help refugees and shelter less. Family Planning Programme. More Medical nursing training and training schools to increase the number of doctors and nurses.

New Capital: Government moved from Karachi to Islamabad for more central area for administration far from the trade centre Karachi.

Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto

Established his key men in army to prevent rebellion.

Simla Agreement: Simla Accord to get the captured land and prisoners from India back from 1971 War.

The Islamic Summit Conference: All Muslim leaders were invited to attend and discuss problems of Pakistan and other Muslim countries and how to solve them.

New Constitution: A better and more democratic constitution.

Industrial Reforms: Nationalization. Federal Ministry of Production was given a lot of Power to control Industrial Units.

Agricultural Reforms: Land Ownership, reduced ceiling on land ownership. Land available for people to hold their own farms.

Security of Tenure: Tenants rights were improved.

Education: Nationalized all private sector schools. More schools were built.

Health and Social Reforms: Rural Health Centres. Basic Health Units were built in urban areas. Training colleges for doctors and nurses were set up. Sale of Medicines under brand name was banned.

Administrative Reforms: Re organized Civil Service. Removed unnecessary distinctions between types of civil workers. Created Federal Security Force (FSF).

The Nuclear Programme: Bhutto started the Nuclear Bomb plan for Pakistan' defence.

Zia-ul-Haq
